WHAT PRAYER DOES IN THE

Few Minutes' Talking With God

The babit of family worship is closely related to the question of personal Christian life. Households are dependent for the case, pleasant gre dependent for the case, piensaut-pility of their internal lite on the in-dividuals who constitute them; in awiquas who constitute tuem; in dike oranner, the freedom and real advantage of family worship arise, fix-no small degree, from the spir-itual sympathy of those who gather theether to pheery it

The late Dean Farrar, in commenting on his mother's habit of withdrawing every morning for an bont to her own room for reading the Rills and other densities books, and for toeditation and prayer, said: fountain, she drew the strength and sweetness which enabled her to ful-all her duties and to remain puroffed by the worries and nettish Thet which are so often the intel erable trials of narrow neighbour never saw her temper disturbed, nor heard her speak one word of auger or caliming or idle gossin, nor saw in her any sign or scutiment unbecoming to a Christjan soul. Her life was ever strong, pitre, rich, and full of blessing and healing. And he says it was all due to that daily morning hour spent with God in the place of prayer, Ten minutes ni real talking with Christ at the opening of the day—

yes, five minutes—will change all the day for you It will make you elsour day for you. It will make you strong for duty: it will put a quiet peace into your heart for all the day's turmoils and strikes; it will give you fresh faith for the day's trials and struggles; it will leave a holy light on your face as you go out into the world; it will fill your heart with gentle thoughts and affectious and gentle thoughts and affections and sympathies, and make your hands delt and kindly for ministry of love. When the private devotion of the individual members of the family this keeps them in accord with all worship, family devotion being one worship, family devotion being one form of it—namely, that which ap-peals to all that is most tender and natural in human relationships and live, and who are most closely aking with us by ties of blood and affection—then we possess the ideal con-dition of family worship, the condi-tion created by the spirituality of each person in it.

TOWARDS the close of the last Harvest Festival in a certain Ou-tario Corps, a shabhilydressed man called the Officers' Quarters, and asked for many miles that day in order to get now was weary and footsore.

His story scented genuine enough.

and the man Lientenant who has charge of the Corps took him in-gave him a couch to sleep on, look off his boots, and then went to the railway station nearby to find not by at train the stranger could go his destination. But when awant-train the stranger could go on to his destination. But when he got back to the Quarters, the man and disappeared, and with him, some of the Corps' money!

On: month later, the Lieutenant found himself at another Corps, and found himself at another Corps, and during the progress of a week-night meeting, saw, the Hall done open gently, and a man's head appear. "Come right in!" shouted the Lieutenant. "Ven'll get warmed up in both body and soul 'f you do."

PEOPLE OF THE ORKNEYS.
With all its quiet and lack of vegetation, there is something very wegetation, there is something very wooling about this northern land, says e writer in the British "Young Soldier," concerning the Orkney and Shetland Islands. The people are Shetland Islands. The people are sad, hecause the tragedy of the sea is ever with them. There is scarcely a family in the islands which has not suffered at the bands of Father Neptune. The women knit all day long. baeks, these women transpior miles obligious to their surroundingsoblivious to their surrounumgs— just knitting!

But the Shetkanders believe abso-lutely in The Salvation Army, they fork to the meetings: give of their little, and give exceedingly well.

TRAINING HOME DAYS. It is very rare indeed that we hear a concession such as "Thank God an expression such as, "Thank God, my Training days are over," says Brigadier Iordan in the African "War Cry," Somehow, with old Officers, or, well, with new, there is a halo of precious remembranes which lingers around the brick an mortar of the institution where "souldlogy," theology, and "serulology" occupied mind and heart. Tired? Ves. often. Anxious? Yes. we were not without a commend where not would a commend-able anxiety to acquire experience and knowledge! Sad? Yes, some-times! Happy? Most always! There are the homes we visited; the only we boomed; the people we urayed with: the meetings we took part in; the Soldiers who got to know and love us; the Home Officers (bless then!) whose interests were ours, and the comrade Cadets who shared our joys and sorrows with us. Dear old scenes and faces.

They live on despite the years that so soon roll between the "it is," and the "it was," THE CAPTAIN'S WORD 'GOES' The ex-prisoners at the Danepur Settlement in India, are housed in a commound of their own surround ad by a wall but the gate is onen all day long and the men are employed in the open fields which belong to the Settlement. So it is moral sus-sion, that holds them, rather than force, bars, chains, and punishment. THE BIBLE'S PURE STREAM. THE BIBLE'S PURE STREAM.
The Biblie is going through the world like a great pure stream, says a writer in the "Victory." The Rhone runs through the city and Genera—a full, clear river of sparting water, just outside the city as small muldy river joins it. The diers water mingles with the clear water. The struggle between the clean and the dirty water is a great sight.

But the great pure stream is the strongest. As the two run on tostrongest. As the two run on the gether the mater becomes clearer and clearer. At last all the mud sinks to the horrom, and the great river sweeps on majestically, as it did before, in all its clearness. So with the Bible, when in repentance with the Bible, when in repentance and with faith we obey its divine message. It is purifying in its effects. Sin sinks out of sight, the Bible sweeps through our lives, day after day, with the water of life, which is Christ, with His cleansing

Army History in Facts and Figures. If there have ever been in the Dominion periods of indifference towards the Salvationiets chose neriods have certainly gone by and The Army and its Work are now subjects of living interest on every hand.

To point to only one proof of ther attitude of the public in this respect, repeated requests are made, as most Army Officers know only too well, for information conderning the organization and its leaders. Men and women who have been asked to speak on these subjects come to speak on these subjects come-with voracious appetites for facts to our people, who often find it dif-feult off-haud to answer their many enquiries. Not every Officer can run a complete bureau for informa-ation of rhis kind.

But we should have said "could" in the place of "can," for now that "The Salvation Army Year Book" is easily available, no one need he without the information that those
